[2] This information is collected for only Galleries and Museums with "All eligible data" open access scope.

Fee shown is based on the charge for adults. Notes are included for institutions with different prices for non-local adults.

[3] Many GLAMs make some – but not all – of their eligible data open access (e.g. for specific projects or outputs) whilst maintaining non-open access policies for most of their data.

This column indicates this for each GLAM by stating either 'all eligible data' or 'some eligible data'.

[4] All dates in year format e.g. 2020 and please citation URLs as a Note in the relevant cell.

Citations of GLAMs' own communications (e.g. a press release) are preferred but 3rd party websites are OK if nothing else is available.

[5] The rights statement that the GLAM applies to its metadata (often not stated explicitly).

All metadata submitted to Europeana must be provided as CC0 therefore GLAMs publishing open data in Europeana have CC0 marked in this column.

[6] GLAM policy statements are often conflicting, subject to change and do not expressly disclaim copyright. To provide some clarity for survey users, this column contains links to the most relevant rights policy and terms of use information provided on GLAM websites (when available). These pages are often generic and lacking in detail so caveat emptor.

[7] Open data volume = number of digital objects made available on open access terms at each web resource.

[207] DM contacted LoC. Reply: 'Thank you for visiting the Library of Congress website and for using the Ask A Librarian service.

I believe you may safely estimate that more than two million items on the Library of Congress website have no known copyright restrictions or are in the public domain.

I do not have an exact number, but the website posts a hint at the bottom left of this page: <https://www.loc.gov/search/> . This is the number of items on the website that are available to researchers anywhere, as opposed to those with rights restrictions that allow the digital contents to be limited. Today that figure is nearly 2.5 million items. This figure is not the answer to your question because there are some "digital items," that are difficult for our systems to differentiate and some materials that are available online with permission from their rights holders--a stipulation presented on the website in the at the collection-level documentation or within the metadata for individual items. For example, catalog records for books for with a link to their records' MARC 856 fields, may link to a digital version of the book, but may also link to a publisher's description. This is a limitation of the record format with which we must live, at least for now. The 2.5 million figure also contains items for which the Library has been granted permission to post online; and for 11,000 rights-protected audio files in the National Jukebox collection <https://www.loc.gov/search/> that are posted as streaming files, with permission. The site also has items that may be in the public domain, but for which research has not been completed, so these remain restricted for off-site use.'
